Integrlicity's monthly newsletter offering goodies, special offers, tips and tricks, useful articles and latest news about Integrlicity and its services.

Welcome message from Alex Lam Managing Director Integrlicity Corporation

Our dear loyal Integrlicity clients and friends,

Welcome to 2008! It's an extremely exciting time for us here at Integrlicity as we fire up our engines after the year-end break. We're evolving and growing rapidly. Our family will be moving and vacating the current premises and moving to a much more spacious office in Centrepoint Bandar Utama.

Renovation is already underway, and by the time our next issue of Fanatical Voices is out, we'll be there!

With every new year, new hopes and aspirations are normally made. We hope to serve you much better and cater for your needs. If we have stepped on your toes in the past, may I apologise and commit to trying harder - we're definitely not perfect, though that's where we aim to be.

Do stay tuned to our blog, as more updates about our move will be documented. For those who missed our year-end greetings to all, check it out here.

Fanatically yours,

Alex Lam
Managing Director

INTEGRICITY IS MOVING!!!

Hey everyone, we always move servers around, emails, people, websites, etc... but this time our office is physically moving. We're a tad cramped at the moment and we need more space. We do apologise to all our family members who have had to endure a bit of a tight spot of late but we'll have heaps more space soon.

Read on here as we document our shifting process.

Apple's Sleek MacBook Air - substance or all air?

Well, well... Apple seems to have done it again, what with launching a sleek new beast for 2008.

The initial images of the MacBook Air are very appealing and sexy, but might look rather flimsy for the average American - maybe us Asians will have a better shot and keeping them alive longer?

Check out our view on Apple's latest buzz.

My "didn't quite make it list" for 2007
